The Archivist - Heterotopia

Meaning another place, Heterotopia is according to Michel Foucault, a space within society where conventional rules are somehow changed. In a time where space can no longer be solely a question of territory it is necessary to rethink the way it is defined and represented. In a world bound by virtual reality, by air bridges, by endless suburbs that lose the notions of centre-periphery, the concept of space is no longer a concrete reality but an abstract fiction.

For Pedro Oliveira Gallery, Rita Sobral Campos developed a project that rehearses the possibility of simultaneity of these spaces. In the attempt to decipher these notions works of several media are exhibited including sculpture, video, installation, wall and floor drawings, posters and photography.
